Mobile is an app that enables users to edit drawings while on-the-go. The latest version of AutoCAD Mobile can now be downloaded from Google Play Store or App Store. AutoCAD Mobile allows users to edit the current drawing and upload the new file to the AutoCAD desktop application. The mobile app runs on Android devices with a camera. The app is free to download. User Interface The main window has navigation controls on the left and the drawing area on the right. This is common with most AutoCAD applications. A set of tools are available in the lower right corner. The toolbar has a work plane tool, an annotation tool, a zoom tool and a center line tool. When zooming is enabled, the black spline is used to show the drawing view. If drawing edges are selected, the wireframe is used. The wireframe can be disabled by pressing the ESC key or holding the SHIFT key. Also, the grid is always shown. The grid can be displayed by pressing the z key. The grid lines are generated automatically by the app when necessary. The navigation tools allow the user to change the drawing view. The annotation tool allows the user to place objects such as symbols, annotations, text labels, points, and polygons. The text editor is the main tool for editing text. The text can be copied or pasted from other files. Objects such as lines, arcs, circles and the existing text can be aligned horizontally or vertically. The wireframe tool is used for visually analyzing the drawing area. The zoom tool is used for magnifying the area of interest. The camera tool is used for capturing the image of a part and pasting it into the current drawing area. The center line tool is used to draw a centerline. Stephen Harper talks about first being a lawyer Related OTTAWA - Prime Minister Stephen Harper had some parting words for Canadians who didn't vote for him last October. And he's using the same words to explain why he will not seek a second mandate in a speech Saturday at an Ottawa event to be broadcast live on CBC-TV. Harper said it's important to accept that in Canada the head of government does not have a mandate to form a government. That's why he's calling for an election. "I haven't got a mandate to govern, but I do have a mandate to unite Canadians, and I will do my very best to ensure that this government works for all Canadians and not just the few," Harper said in a wide-ranging speech at a convention of the Conservative party in Ottawa. "I believe that, as Conservatives, our strength is not in simply occupying the seats in Parliament. It is in uniting Canadians to advance a positive, hopeful vision for the future." And Harper promised to work in a "responsible" way to deal with the many policy challenges facing the country. "Canada is in a period of change, and we are at the beginning of that change," he said. "I will not be here for the next two years as prime minister to make another attempt to get the Conservative party into government." Harper delivered his remarks in English to about 600 party members and supporters in the packed convention centre. The proceedings were watched by hundreds of party volunteers from across the country watching it on CBC-TV. In his speech, Harper gave a pointed warning to politicians who would be tempted to tinker with the CBC-TV telecasting system. "One thing we will not do in this house, or anywhere else is ever to alter or tamper with our renowned Canadian public broadcasting system. It is essential
