I've tried both options and have tried different paths, file names, and sizes. The reason I'm asking about the 64 version is because I know a lot of people who use it as a live folder for recordings, DVDs, photos, music, and other things.

I'm still pretty new to coding and when I attempted to compile the code from the tut, I received the following error: A: Relevant advice I found on the Web: On Windows 7 and older, 32-bit programs run in 64-bit mode when installed; when 64-bit programs are installed, you must have a 64-bit version of Windows to use them. So you need to get a 64-bit version of Windows. What you can do if you don't have one: Buy one. Install another version of Windows, such as XP or 2000, if you have one. Here's some advice: You can buy the 64-bit version of Windows 7 here. You can install another version of Windows here. If you don't want to use the 64-bit version, you can use the 32-bit version, but you can't boot from it. One thing to note is that although the 64-bit version of Windows 7 is free, the 32-bit version is not.

Punchant HomeGet the most out of your gym by looking at your whole body. If you don't have a dumbbell, skip the section and come back to it later. Jump Rope: That's right. This is a cardio workout. It will get you in great shape and even help you burn fat. If you're looking to burn fat fast, jump rope is the way to go. This low-impact workout is great for those recovering from injuries. Skip the section and come back to it later if you have any injuries. Dumbbells: Dumbbells are a great tool if you're looking to look good in that certain dress.
"What?" you ask. Dumbbells work your back, arms, chest, core, legs, and you even get a great waist workout. If you're not sure if you want to invest, you can also skip the section, and come back to it later. You can also modify the exercises in the next section to work your parts. Stationary Bike: Biking is great for the entire body and the best part is that it's such a low-impact workout that it can be used by even those recovering from injuries. Biking strengthens your core, arms, back, and legs. It's not for those looking for a real cardio workout though. Swiss Steppers: If you want to work your hamstrings, this is the workout for you. It's also great for the abs and core. You can modify this workout for upper and lower body workouts by alternating between planks and peddles. This is also a great tool for working out in recovery mode, since this is a lower-impact workout. Treadmill: If you're looking to get your cardio in but don't want to jump on a bike or do a group fitness class, this is the exercise for you. It's low-impact so it can be used by people recovering from injuries. It's also great for incorporating weight training if you want to, though it's really not necessary. Group Fitness Class:
