Using a series of advanced algorithms, FIFA® 22's 'HyperMotion' technology collects and analyses the motion of the player's body, combining it with information from cameras and sensors to track a player's every move. By using this data, "HyperMotion" can create advanced animations in-game, meaning players move more like life, and collisions are more responsive and accurate. "The 'HyperMotion' technology comes from the idea of recreating the most intense and authentic moments in-game," FIFA Technical Director Jürgen Vindor said. "By focusing on the evolution of player movement, FIFA 22 will immerse players in a new level of storytelling." New, customizable Player Data The 'Player Data' feature allows you to build a football personality for players, creating profiles based on an individual's unique attributes and traits. "Players are now on an individual level as well as a collective level. Now players can combine their attributes to build a unique identity. This is unprecedented for a football game." Improved Player Insights The "Player Insights" feature gives you deeper insights into the players around you. "The off-ball actions of players including Interceptions, Take-ons and Recoveries are now included in the statistics," Jürgen Vindor said. "The statistics also now show players through crowds - and you can now see who is influencing which players." The camera mode has been overhauled, and new animations have been added to the game, offering the world's finest goalkeepers and defenders a more realistic reaction. The game's graphics engine is now fully 3D and includes animation-driven player models, new animations, enhanced lighting and improved crowds.
