“For the first time, we’re able to use real, live gameplay data to improve the in-game action and behavior in the most immersive and realistic way,” said Josh Broadbent, Head of Behaviour. The EA SPORTS Football Club has been revamped. As an addition to PES 2018’s Football Club in-game content, the FIFA platform now offers unparalleled insight into player form and team action. Players can follow their clubs and players on an enhanced pitch-side line-up tracker. These players include club legends as well as footballers making their FIFA debut. “Our football data experts spend most of their time monitoring the in-game action on pitch, analyzing and dissecting it so we could build the most realistic simulation of the beautiful game on PlayStation 4,” said Larry Nelson, Head of Football. “This year we’ve revamped our Football Club in-game platform to deliver even more insight into player form and team action. As we continue to extend that technology into the real-life Premier League, it makes sense to make our Football Club platform a key part of what we do.” A brand new story mode takes players through the beginning of a 365-day year - from an end-of-season Championship celebration, through to the World Cup and the start of a new professional campaign season. The story mode sees players able to progress through the ranks and take on the responsibility of the club’s coach. There are around seven main story-arc chapters (each roughly one-and-a-half hours long) and between three and five secondary objectives that act as tutorials which can be done at any point during the story mode. The story mode on the PlayStation 4 allows for new and enhanced features such as the ability to work for a team (can view their stats and phone calls), and create a practice squad (shows you what they can and can’t do) and a free-transfer (allows you to set up a deal and enter it with a click of a button). The pro mode also saw a major upgrade for managers. Taking place between training sessions and match days, the manager of a team is able to work with his players to improve their performance on the pitch and allow them to build their reputation with the club. The manager is now also able to comment on players and have his voice heard by the club’s supporters (up to four times per week
