Monster Camp is a unique blend of 6 playable characters including a bad-ass ballerina, a punk witch and a new girl that seems like a perfectionist. They are entering in the World of Legendary Monsters Junior Camp for a chance to learn more about monsters. On their way, however, they meet a mysterious new friend who seems like an old friend, which shouldn't be all that hard. Gameplay Monster Camp will have you running, jumping and fighting in... 20,000 words. That's how long the opening credits of Dragon Quest XI: Echoes of an Elusive Age for Nintendo Switch, originally designed for 2D games, took to finish. Of course, it took more than just 20,000 words to make a game like this. Which is why we decided to share the story behind the credits in this series of videos, as well as the credits of two other games, with you. The Story Behind the Opening Credits of Dragon Quest XI As a whole, the Dragon Quest series has always been a genre experiment. So what's a Dragon Quest game without amazing opening and closing sequences? For Echoes of an Elusive Age, the first Dragon Quest game on a new platform, it was a must. We wanted to make the transition from one console generation to the next, as seamless as possible. For this, a long opening sequence was the best idea. Even if the game is in 2D, we have to make it look pretty. The first thing we considered were how to adapt the original main and ending videos of Dragon Quest VII. We started with the central theme of the game, which is understanding and handling your heritage. The parents in the original are old and traditional, so you can see the pressure they have to handle the upbringing of their son. Dragon Quest VII was also one of the first Nintendo games with a Japanese voice-over, so we thought it might be fun to reference it in the opening and closing credits. Also, the intro of Echoes of an Elusive Age will have two different themes, depending on the region. One for North America, and one for Japan. For the credits, we wanted to go for a more colorful palette. The zebra-striped background is a reference to the tagline of the game. And since we never show the player the ending at the beginning of the game, we included a little hint of what's to come. You'll see a familiar face in a zebra-pattern

"Warp Factory" is a combination of interplanetary automata-building challenge, puzzle game, and fun physics experiment. The player takes control of an unnamed laboratory manager who is tasked with building a factory in the centre of the game's solar system. The core of the game revolves around an arbitrary and randomly generated world, whose geometry and surface change in every level. The player must build industrial engines, initiate portal communications between planets, and assemble space stations and even moons to get to the core. But the atmosphere, the shape and size of the stars, and the time it takes to reach the core are all completely arbitrary and are never the same in any playthrough. As the player progresses through this universe, he or she will be challenged with a collection of increasingly difficult challenges.SALT LAKE CITY -- A Utah mom who criticized a new school dress code in a viral Facebook video has withdrawn her complaint because she says she needs to focus on her children. Erin Palin said she didn't know she would be associated with a nationally publicized video when she posted the video on Facebook in late November. "I definitely feel like I was duped," she told KSL. In the video, Palin criticized how much clothing the "new" dress code requires students at the Juan Diego Catholic School in Murray, Utah, to wear. In the video, she accused the school's principal of trying to teach students to be prostitutes. "They're walking down the hall with an even cut of their bottoms showing," Palin said in the video, as she pulled an elastic band from her daughter's waist, showing underwear. Despite her comments, Palin said she hasn't experienced any negative consequences at the school as a result of her viral video. However, the post quickly spread across social media, and her complaint caught the attention of media outlets. "The school's concerned about a 16-year-old with a mic and her parents coming in to cause trouble," Palin told the Deseret News. In a recent Facebook post, Palin claimed that the school told her she could speak at the school after the dress code video, so she's decided to step aside and do that. "I am going to be speaking at the school in the near future," she wrote. "Knowing this dress code makes it hard c9d1549cdd

10/21/2015, 10:39am EST by MegWitch Golden Clan Records' sci-fi cult classic opuses an appropriately obscure and eerie soundtrack. Timeless scores and creepy haunted house chills are what you can expect from the Golden Clan Records release entitled Body Horror Presents: Gunborg (1985), an underground cult hit from the 1980s about an indie horror film being recut. Chosen to provide the music for the project’s trailer, all four ‘Gunborg’ films, and an extensive excerpt from the rejected sequel, ‘The Gunborg Children’, which highlights the most popular music cues, this soundtrack is an appropriate choice to listen to on Halloween. Relive the reign of terror as you spook yourself in the eerie and darkly atmospheric music from Swedish indie cult hit, Gunborg. On October 23rd, 2015, Golden Clan Records and Silver Moon Media present Body Horror Presents: Gunborg (1985), a cult classic with extreme underground appeal. Released in the summer of 1985, the film was the follow-up to the cult hit Swedish film ‘Gunborg’, starring Olle Haggbom (the father of Louis Hernandez, the director of the epic Danish series ‘Blek’) and with scary scenes in both Swedish and English versions. The film was known for its psychological themes from the onset. Filling a pronounced gap in the cult horror genre, Body Horror Presents: Gunborg (1985) made the rounds in the bar-crawls from the main distributors in the U.S. and around Europe. With that background and the amazing cult following in Sweden, Golden Clan Records, who were the U.S. distributor for the film, secured the rights to release Gunborg: Dark Matter Soundtrack internationally. Now in the spotlight of Golden Clan Records, ‘Gunborg’, the film and its cult following are flourishing in the 21st century, earning regular screenings and expanded presence at screening series like PARSFF and Flipside. The film received the international attention and support from Faust Coppola and Fred W. Roos Jr. (Mayor of Vicksburg, Mississippi) as a ‘cult classic’ and sparked massive interest for the science-fiction-horror genre, which made Gunborg some of the most wanted titles in the 1980s. Impressively, Gunborg: Dark Matter is the first time the successful film has received a

Vampires’ Melody is a heart-warming drama set in a world where vampires co-exist with humans. Set in a peaceful village, the story begins with the beautiful Yella preparing to leave home. Her closest friend, Athena, gives Yella a special coin to take with her into the outside world. While Yella is enjoying the freedom that comes with a new job and having fun with friends, a mysterious man with undead eyes appears. A tragic life event triggers a chain of events that results in Yella’s soul being taken by him. Both Athena and Yella are unable to return to their true forms, and as a result, they end up in a state of suspended animation. The unsung hero is Dr. Ichiro, who takes them to the Master of Life, a man named Kokoro. Using an advanced technology, Kokoro unites them with one another, and the three of them receive life-saving treatments at the Ancient Capital. But their worries about Yella are quickly forgotten as Kokoro awakens Yella’s soul to make her a vampire. The three then set off to find the Divine Beast hunters to return Yella to a human life. Yella is a quiet, happy girl whose lively imagination makes her at times become a young kid again. Athena is a “double-dumb” girl who has cute, lovely eyes. She hates Yella from the bottom of her heart, and because of her “double-dumbness,” has never been able to accept her. One day, she was shot by lightning and was attacked by Kokoro, but was saved by Yella. She feels that she owes her life to Yella, and is waiting for a chance to pay Yella back. Dr. Ichiro is a lovable eccentric scientist with a warm heart who works hard to preserve life. He is the only one who knows the truth about Yella and the Divine Beast hunters. He also helps Kokoro, who saved him from certain death many times. The Divine Beast Hunters (twin girls) are earnest young noble girls who are hunting the Divine Beasts in order to restore the balance of life. Mysterious Man with Undead Eyes is the Divine Beast Dr. Ichiro needs to protect Yella from. Under the influence of his fear, he kills the people he loves, including Dr. Ichiro’s wife and son. The mysterious man is charged with the murder of his own wife and son and can’t ever escape
