JIM (Journal of Invoice Management) is free invoicing software for small or medium sized companies. It is designed to do things like recording sales and purchases, producing payroll invoices, accounts payable and payable and to produce ordinary and VAT invoices. A database of customers and suppliers can be set up, and monthly snapshots of the previous month stored. Creating a company and a record of accounts receivable, accounts payable and VAT invoices can be done. Findings can be saved to the database and saved as regular reports. A list of outstanding invoices can be set up, and reminders e-mailed. The only thing you need to do yourself is to figure out the VAT tax rate, the standard VAT rate, and the VAT invoice code when creating a customer or a supplier. The software has three big advantages. 1. VAT invoices and VAT tax invoices (VAT18) are entered on-screen automatically by default; VAT invoices being the VAT invoice issued, and the VAT tax invoice being the VAT invoices created when VAT is charged. 2. JIM can be used at home to do an instant printout of the invoice. 3. The manual invoices can be exported to a database for further processing. To add a supplier or a customer enter the data, which consists of name, address, phone number and VAT number. To confirm a supplier or customer's data you can check-in or check out the data. The dates for which you wish to have invoices or VAT invoices issued can be entered. You can choose to have them issued on-screen automatically, or you can choose to have them printed off and sent to a customer as a regular invoice or a VAT invoice. VAT invoices and VAT tax invoices are entered on-screen automatically. The date for which the invoice is to be issued can also be entered on-screen. These can be saved as regular invoices or VAT invoices and printed off and sent to the customer as a regular invoice or a VAT invoice. As a further add-on you can choose to have the VAT invoice printed and sent to the customer as a regular invoice or a VAT invoice. The VAT invoice code can be set using the standard VAT rate, the current VAT rate or the VAT invoice code when you record a VAT invoice. To output a VAT invoice or a VAT tax invoice you can choose to have it printed. The creation of regular invoices, VAT invo
