Poor outcomes in end-stage renal disease are largely preventable by improving care. In the last decade, many studies have been designed to examine the incidence of delirium during hemodialysis (HD). This systematic review summarizes the best available evidence on the incidence of delirium during HD in both inpatient and outpatient settings and assesses its risk reduction by different patient characteristics.

Databases from May 2006 to November 2018 were searched to identify any observational study that reported the incidence of delirium during HD in adult patients. Two independent reviewers screened the studies, assessed the quality, and extracted the data. Pooled results were calculated for one-way and two-way interactions to identify high-risk groups that may benefit from specific interventions. The data set included 10 studies that enrolled a total of 1363 patients. Delirium occurred in 39% of patients, and the relative risk (RR) of delirium was 1.63 (95% confidence interval [CI], 1.35-1.97). Older patients, intensive care unit admission, a renal replacement therapy duration ≥5 hr, dementia, intensive care unit stay, and dialysis vintage of Q: XCode - VC++ I am having a difficult time getting my VC++ project to link with my C# project. We had done some work with VC++ previously (think a little over 5 years ago) on an initial project that's no longer around, and my first thought was to just get a dump of that and 'fix' some issues that had popped up. I spent about 10 hours downloading all of the VC++ files onto my computer in the event that I needed them for maintenance and/or for this project. However, I can't figure out how to view or compile the code, as it requires a visual C
