The goals of the Asthma Clinical Research Network are to develop, implement, and evaluate intervention strategies for use in clinical settings to improve the care of children and adolescents with asthma. The ACT program will be administered within a network of hospitals and clinics that are representative of a broad range of urban and suburban clinical settings in the U.S. A total of 216 families with children with persistent asthma will be recruited into the study. A universal intervention (called the Standard Asthma Control Program) will be implemented at 96 clinic sites. At a second set of clinics in the same settings, more intensive intervention programs will be implemented. The intervention strategies to be implemented include use of information, education, and support strategies to: promote better asthma management practices; use protocols that promote better asthma management; train providers to develop and implement better asthma management practices; and provide feedback to providers regarding the care of their asthmatic patients. Four research projects will evaluate the effectiveness of these programs. One project will test the question of whether training nurses to implement and manage a standardized asthma-management program affects the subsequent management of asthma in practice settings. Another project will examine the effects of a team-based protocol that encourages clinician-to-clinician discussions about patients' asthma control compared with a usual-care control group. A third project will evaluate in children with asthma an information-based intervention to guide parents' management of asthma symptoms. The fourth project will study a tool that will help physicians identify the major cause of asthma in a patient. In addition, four investigator-initiated quality-of-life studies will investigate the physical and psychosocial sequelae of childhood asthma from the perspectives of children, their families, and their physicians. These studies will be conducted separately from the main ACT project and will be used to address issues raised during the implementation of the Standard Asthma Control Program. The ACT Network will conduct an initial pilot study to assess the feasibility of the data-collection procedures, which will be used in the full-scale ACT study. The ACT Network will be organized at several levels with three committees to: 1) oversee the ACT Network activities; 2) design and implement training programs, and 3) oversee the methodological aspects of the study.
