What's new:

- Plot Summary Plot Synopsis I. The Beginning A mysterious silhouette continues to haunt the skies over West Coast while all sorts of creatures keep vanishing into blackness. There's no denying the resemblance of this silhouette to the concept of a Cyberman - something the Dr. Madigan once said. Not surprisingly, the world reacts poorly to this perceived terror - or at least the good folks of Los Angeles believe it to be so. Of course, they don't really understand the extent of Cybertech during that time. This is where humans discover the Legend of Shadow Legend. II. The Beginning II.1 Whatever it is, it's bringing forth an even greater power... at least, from the perspective of a personage called the Shadow Lord - and his Shadow Machine. But there's nothing to worry about - except that Shadow Lord is getting assistance from a strange man whose alternate name is Hozni Yamori. Suddenly, there's an invasion of the United States! Due to certain protection schemes set up in place, Dr. Madigan is the only human capable of spotting these invasion techniques... but he's nowhere to be found. The Shadow Lord launches attacks in various major cities around the U.S., but so far, he's only been able to kill a handful of people. II.2 To the praise of the Shadow Lord comes the one who embodies the consciousness of his Overmind, which he dubs 'Excalibur.' The Overmind is an entity that can move, think, and feel - just as humans do. How its thinking is conducted, however, is vastly different - though the speed at which Excalibur can actually use those thoughts is slightly faster than a human being. Furthermore, it's able to multiply those thought energies, so that it can have a vast array of different and possibly even unknown powers. Dr. Madigan's research on Excalibur reveals the shocking truth: the Overmind was created by human beings, who had their cybernetic body's cybernetics replaced with cyberneural body parts that strongly resemble human sensory nerves. II.3 With the help of Excalibur, they take Doctor Madigan to an area where humans seem to be hunting for the source of that silhouette... but he only finds the shadow of a tall structure with a helix-shaped head. Just before he escapes, an eye-opening experience of being part of Excalibur reveals a new sensation: that of true feelings like longing and sorrow. He is transported to a
