where I have: $("download-steam-onlinesonlinetool.AppTransforms.OnScreenContent") A: I should have caught this earlier, but I'm going to make an attempt to provide an answer, should you not be able to make use of my suggestion. The issue is that `$(".download-steam-onlinesonlinetool.AppTransforms.OnScreenContent")` was trying to find this HTML in the DOM when it should have been looking for the CSS class. To ensure `$(".download-steam-onlinesonlinetool.AppTransforms.OnScreenContent")` looks at the CSS you need to set the CSS property for selector: Your selector: `.download-steam-onlinesonlinetool.AppTransforms.OnScreenContent` Needs to be set to be: `[class*=OnScreenContent]` Alternatively, if you're using a method, such as `jQuery.find()` that looks for the HTML contents in the DOM, you need to use `attr()` instead of `text()`. Alternatively, consider using `text()` with a `setTextContent()` method on the element if you want to set the inner HTML. See this example below that should demonstrate the difference between `$.text()` and `.text()`: `$('#button').on('click', function() { $('#input').text('The Quick Brown Fox Jumped Over The Lazy Dog'); })` Click Me Mr Robert Campagnolo is very closely involved with the Ducati team. Mr Campagnolo is the technical consultant and is absolutely capable of producing a top championship winner in the EK, many years later than he has done with the Ducati team. The same can be said for Mr Karel Abraham. Mr Abraham is very closely involved with the Suzuki team. For 2 years he has been involved with the Suzuki factory riders and in the very recent past I believe he was probably the highest placed non Suzuki rider in the last GPs. I personally believe that the Suzuki factory riders have a good chance of winning this years championship. I think
