Design and characteristics of the SAW-MUTRIX multi-object visualisation radars. The structure and characteristics of the SAW-MUTRIX multi-object visualisation radars developed in Darmstadt for the Mecklenburg-Vorpommern State Land and Water Office are presented. Each radar includes 512 channels in common frequencies and 5 polarizations. A kernel for the power-time spectra is constructed in the frequency domain. For standard operation, a spectral representation is used. The algorithm selects the most important objects from an entire range profile for the display. The detection area is about 1 km wide with a resolution of 100 m. The above characteristics are maintained in an outdoor and in an indoor application, with a signal-to-noise ratio of 10 dB. The display is a 2D polar map. The radar performance is characterised for various object classes and in various configurations. The directional resolution is larger than 30°.

Ascorbate metabolism in murine L1210 leukemia cells. L1210 leukemia cells incubated in vitro for 24 h with [14C]ascorbate (0.5 mM) exhibit a time-dependent reduction in ascorbate concentration and a concomitant increase in 14CO₂ and [14C]oxalate. The ascorbate concentration drops by as much as 60% with a concomitant increase in oxalate concentration of nearly fourfold. Consistent with this observation, cellular ascorbate uptake is greatly stimulated by oxalate, and the rate of [14C]ascorbate uptake, measured by liquid scintillation counting of [14C]ascorbate, is much greater than predicted from the ascorbate concentration in the culture medium. The concentration of cellular ascorbate does not increase with a concomitant increase in activity of ascorbate-dependent oxidoreductases, whereas the concentration of oxalate does increase with a concomitant increase in the activities of both the

Using an approximation to the cable equation, the various sources of voltage propagation, and other passive circuit elements, a simple three-compartment model of CA1 pyramidal neurons in hippocampal slices has been constructed, and its limit cycle dynamics simulated. 2. The model structure is consistent with published observations of biphasic field potential waveforms that accompany spontaneous oscillations in CA1 pyramidal neurons. 3. The model provides a tool for investigating a number of issues related to pattern of impulse generation, its morphological basis, and synaptic locations.Q: How can I let a ball return to a circle in Unity without using a collider to achieve so? I wish to make a jumping game so I created a ball with a rigidbody to jump, but the ball's speed can be extremely slow that it's like the gravity is extremely high. I tried using a jump force but it doesn't allow the jump to have the desired shape; it makes my jump feel very jarring to me. The rough idea is like this: ball gravity is set, it falls freely but bounces back to the floor's position. Is there any way to use a physic system to achieve that? A: Create a normal collision constraint between the ground and the ball. The ground has an empty script attached with an OnTriggerEnter2D() function so that the ball hits the ground when it is near. void OnTriggerEnter2D(Collision2D collision) { if(collision.gameObject.tag=="Ground") /* Update the ball's position by the inverse of its velocity */ ball.position += new Vector
