Sasha Banks, Bill Goldberg, Big Cass, Becky Lynch, and Daniel Cormier. Now that's a dream match. But how does all of this information look on paper? FOX Sports will air the first women's pay-per-view event in history. The WWE's first all-women's PPV is set to take place on May 19 in Brooklyn, New York. The event will air on the FOX Sports Network and will feature various matches including a women's PPV main event between Ronda Rousey, Becky Lynch, and Charlotte Flair for the WWE Raw Women's Championship. FOX Sports is naming the event "The Biggest Party of the Summer." If you do want to attend the PPV, tickets go on sale on June 11 and are priced at $99.99. The card will be announced on Monday, June 11. As previously reported, earlier this week 205 Live producer and WWE creative producer Joey Mercury told WWE Hall of Famer and co-host of The Pete Rosenberg Show, Jesse Ventura, that the card for the PPV will be headlined by Ronda Rousey vs. Charlotte Flair for the Raw Women's Championship. There have been a number of rumors regarding the PPV, with Rousey vs. Flair for the championship being the major storyline that has dominated the division. The winner will then go on to face Lynch for the inaugural Women's Championship at the Greatest Royal Rumble in October. If Rousey isn't defeated by Flair in the PPV, rumors have been circulating suggesting a match between Ronda and Becky Lynch may take place at SummerSlam. Rousey famously stated on The Pete Rosenberg Show that she doesn't care who Becky's face is painted on, and if she's defeated, she will not relinquish the RAW Women's Championship. The first rumors of Becky Lynch and Ronda Rousey facing off in a "Battle of the Bricks" match at SummerSlam circulated last year during The New Day's WrestleMania run. The New Day were the main event for the night, but Becky Lynch and Ronda Rousey were rumored to face off in a car wreck finisher. There was never any sort of confirmation or denial of that rumor. If Rousey is challenged by Becky for the RAW Women's Championship, she will likely defend her title against Charlotte Flair. In February, Becky and Flair were in the main event of a RAW and were
