Commission (CPSC) was established in 1972 by the Consumer Product Safety Act, which was codified in Title 15, United States Code, Chapter 12 as part of the new Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act. It is charged with ensuring the safety of consumer products, including toys, medicines, cosmetics, household appliances, and workplace equipment, through research, education, and enforcement. Federal regulations The CPSC is responsible for: The Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act authorizes the Commission, in its discretion, to seek civil penalties and to order temporary or permanent injunctive relief, including a recall order, against a person or firm that violates Federal consumer product safety rules. Section 911 of the Act authorizes the Commission, in its discretion, to seek or issue civil penalties against a person or firm that violates a Federal consumer product safety rule. Recalls The CPSC has issued over 80,000 recalls since the commission's founding, accounting for more than half of all recalls in the United States since the agency began issuing Federal recalls in 1975. In 2017, the CPSC issued 1,187 recalls. Under the CPSC, the manufacturer of a potentially dangerous consumer product (defined as any manufactured product that is sold or advertised for sale to the public, such as toys, clothing, bicycles, refrigerators, trucks, Tasers, and cell phones) is responsible for providing a recall notice, a "command to stop offering for sale" notice, or

It was like, WOW! :D > I would agree. I was laughing at that part too!]]>Here's a video of a rant against Starbucks from someone who has an idea of what their life could have been like if they had only stuck with their first passions. It's a little thought-provoking which I hope it will be, as well as bringing a smile to your face. World peace. It has been an on-and-off issue for as long as I've been aware of the possibility of it. My first ventures into becoming a world citizen were years ago: I read Gayle

Experience the horror as Max Cooper, the sole survivor of a hostile world. As you fight for survival, it's your own death that's at stake as you become infected yourself and the horror of the world crumbles all around you. Created by acclaimed developer of survival horror games, The Game Kitchen, Mind Dead Cracked Version is an intense psychological horror experience in both single player mode or locked to the latest horror story created from award-winning writers and game developers. We have just released a major update to Stormfall. This update adds a new map for Stormfall: Reign of the Unseelie Queen, a new objective for Reinforcements, a new Challenge Level for the Player, another Onslaught which can be used for the Onslaught Stacking Challenge, new Rewards for the Onslaught Stacking Challenge, and Last man Standing Mode. We also have a special treat that we are giving away for the next few days. We have also done work on some of the game systems to make them more balanced and to make them have more effects on gameplay. Most notably, we've added the concept of loot boxes into the game. You're going to be in for a treat as you may have been noticing us releasing little previews of what we are working on. We have been adding a lot of things to Stormfall, so we decided to post a small preview video and to say what we have been working on this past week. The first video is a preview of the work we have been doing to make the game more fun for everyone. Not only was we adding the concept of loot boxes to the game, we have been implementing the concept of Horizontal Waves. The second video is for the new challenge we added for this week. It is called the Unseelie Horde Challenge. We're playing a round of this and we're in for a treat. We are about a week away from our next big update (the Onslaught Stacking Challenge) and we have been working hard on some of the features for the next major update and we have just posted a small preview for those who are d41b202975

The precise information they [Microsoft] hold about who owns a domain name can reveal a lot about how a person is trying to hide who they are online. And so the fact that they are discussing the disclosure of a subset of information about these companies means they have every incentive to have a moral duty to disclose at least this information.

I'm not personally convinced that this might be a conspiracy to destroy Microsoft (and apparently to stop people shopping around outside of Microsoft), and some of the questions posed to Cameron about the content/domain filtering shenanigans look like they have plausible answers.

However the problems are real, and while.biz is under far less scrutiny than.gov, all the.gov domains are constantly changing and people are not necessarily willing to spend the money to observe them. I'm surprised that Microsoft's arch rival Google haven't been affected by the banning of domains they've owned.

However I don't really buy the "people don't shop through Go Daddy" bit. The fact that Go Daddy now have such an effective monopoly that their domain platform is the go-to-shopway-for-internet-domain-names should give people pause for thought. Of course there are web hosting companies with much better qualities, but a single company with complete control over the access points to the internet?

This would not be the sort of thing done by the government due to the fact that the government already have an effective monopoly over the process of registering.gov
Which is another reason why I really can't imagine Microsoft were involved in some govt conspiracy
