Here's what I have: #filename in text file contains: # 'spot' # 'spot' # 'spot' #Read textfile with open("textfile.txt", "r") as file: lines = file.readlines() #print lines #store each line L = [] for line in lines: L.append(line) #print L #L list is now ['spot','spot','spot'] It's been a long time since I've touched Python, I'm sure I'm missing something obvious. A: When you read lines from a file, you're getting it as a generator. Since a generator can only yield values one at a time, it's impossible to use append to add multiple lines. What you can do is read all the lines in a loop, and

as you're processing them in the loop, put them in your list. with open('textfile.txt', 'r') as file: all_lines = file.readlines() L = [] for line in 6d1f23a050
